

GUIDELINES FOR BOOK AND MEDIA REVIEWS

JOURNAL OF BIBLICAL INTEGRATION IN BUSINESS

The JBIB publishes original reviews of books, journals, social websites, simulations, movies, blogs, or any other form of media.

Professors interested in biblical integration have many resources available – and limited time. The JBIB endeavors to assist readers to find the most useful media for classroom, personal or academic use. The book or media review should discuss the value of the resource; is it worth the time to search out and watch or read?

A book or media review should:

1. List the full publication citation or connection details such as the author, publisher, URL, date posted or printed and so forth. Follow these with a “Reviewed by (name) (university).”
2. State your level of recommendation for the publication or media. To what degree is it useful or not useful to others? Under what conditions?
3. In approximately 300-1000 words, discuss your reasons for the recommendation by answering questions such as the following. Why did you make the recommendation you did? What are the philosophical assumptions behind the words or images? How does the media contribute to, or detract from, Biblical integration? What is the best use of the media? Is it useful for classes? What level and type of classes? What does it cost?
